1978 stoppen news stories about

By SCOTT HIGGINSON
Assistant News Editor

As 1978 sinks fast into the past, people around the world reflect on the news events of the year. Newspaper editors are no different.

A poll was conducted among the editors and staff of The Daily Universe in an effort to find 1978's top 10 stories at BYU. Voting for the top five was clearly unanimous, with only three or four dissenting opinions, but the selection of the other five were as varied as the staff itself.

Following is a brief synopsis of those top stories: Read and reflect.

Blacks receive priesthood

On Friday, June 9, 1978 an historic decree was issued to all the world by the First Presidency of the LDS church. For the first time in the history of the 148-old church, black male members would be allowed to officiate in church ordinances. Simple words, in a letter addressed to church leaders, read, "all of our brethren who are worthy may receive the priesthood." These words changed the lives of many black LDS members, who for years had dreamed of the day when they too would be able to receive all of the Church's blessings.

The story caused a ripple throughout the world.

Major magazines stopped their presses to include the historic announcement.

The story was greeted with gladness from almost everyone; world leaders praised the authorities of the Church's compassion and courage. "Because the blacks had never been allowed to hold the priesthood, many LDS people did not believe the revelation had come when first told about it by friends. However, when they were convinced that it had truly occurred, they were pleased and excited."

The story demanded immediate attention and the Universe went to press to publish an extra, only the third to be published by the paper in 15 years.

Fair housing dispute

BYU came under fire from the federal government in March because under the U.S. Justice Department felt the university and landlords of off-campus housing developments were in violation of the Fair Housing Act. The Justice Department felt "the defendants have refused to rent dwellings to persons because of their sex."

The proposed suit was sparked when a woman was not allowed to rent the only apartment left in a certain complex because it was in the area of the complex reserved for members of the opposite sex. President Dallin H. Oaks argued that BYU was a church-sponsored institution and protected under the First Amendment to make its own rules in spite of legal restrictions.

The Justice Department felt the policies of BYU off-campus housing affected others who were not connected with the University. The complaint was settled out of court with BYU and the Justice Department agreeing to allow landlords to decide if they wanted to continue to be approved BYU housing and keep the sexes in separate buildings or lose their BYU stamp of approval and allow apartments of both sexes to live under the same roof.

However, only "students" were to be permitted to live in the approved housing. The definition of "student" was so loosely defined at the time that no further problem has developed.

Marie Rae Scharp

Late the night of June 29, an unknown person entered the unlocked apartment of Marie Rae Scharp, 26. Raped and strangled, the young woman was left to be discovered by her roommates the next morning as they came to wake her from "sleeping in."

Few clues were left for the police as they tried to piece together the facts surrounding the murder. The four roommates moved out of the apartment, haunted by the memory of what was there.

Miss Scharp had served a mission for the LDS Church in Guatemala from March 1975 to September 1976.

The lack of an adequate crime lab in Utah hindered police who worked in vain to find the killer. Today they are no closer to solving the crime than they were when it occurred.

Jeans: To wear or not to wear

A. Lavon Bryan caused smiles from some and shock from others when she wrote a letter to the University detailing how she entered the McKay Testing Center to take a test, clad in a long coat and "under pants." Personnel at the testing center had told her she could not take her test because the jeans she was wearing did not conform to university dress standards. She went to a nearby restroom where she removed her "jeans" and returned to her test.

The story made national news. Paul Harvey on his daily noon-hour broadcast said "task-task-task." The Associated Press ran the story on its wire service across the country. The Universe was flooded with letters to the editor about the story.

Earlier in the spring, J. Elliot Cameron, dean of student life, had made the jeans issue news, by offering

The defending NFL champion Dallas Cowboys and the Pittsburgh Steelers will advance to the Super Bowl in two weeks after both teams completely demolished their playoff opponents Sunday.

The Cowboys scored twice in the fourth quarter to take a 28-0 victory over the Los Angeles Rams. In Pittsburgh, the Steelers took advantage of a barrage of Houston errors to end the Oilers hopes of a Super Bowl berth winning 34-5.

Franco Harris and Rocky Bleier gave Pittsburgh a couple of early touchdowns, then Houston started giving the Steelers the ball — over and over again.

And before Sunday's American Football Conference game was over, the Oilers had given Terry Bradshaw a chance to tear them up in a devastating 19-second span. And that gave the Steelers a 34-5 victory and a berth in Super Bowl XIII.

A driving rain and near-freezing temperatures turned what was supposed to be a hard-nosed battle into a farce. There were seven interceptions by Los Angeles, which was five picked off by Pittsburgh.

Cagers Finish Second

The Cougar's 6-5 junior center, Tina Gunn, was held to a season low of 18 points in the Championship game of the Copper Classic as the University of Utah defeated the Cats 77-76 for the title.

Gunn had been averaging 37.7 points a game and 13.3 rebounds an outing before the tournament.

The game was tied at 76 with only 22 seconds remaining when the Ute's Lori Parrish hit on the front end of a one-on-one to give Utah the lead. The Cougars missed their final shot attemp and time ran out before BYU could get the ball back.

Gunn was named to the All-tournament team along with Parrish of Utah, Pam Shirley of Utah State and Kathy Miller and Penny Wenberg of Weber State. The Cougars defeated Weber State 92-91 in the opening round of the tournament and came back from a 12-point deficit in doing it. Weber State took a 62-50 lead early in the second half.

BYU tied the game at 81 and went on to defeat the Wildcats 97-95 on the strength of Gunn's shooting from the charity stripe.

The Cougars shot 56 percent from the field and 75 percent from the line. Gunn was dominating on the boards and scored 36 points during the game.

BYU will face Weber again on the 13th when the Cougars travel to Oden for a conference game with the Wildcats.

And there were 12 fumbles, a record for a National Football League championship game.

The Steelers got lucky when the Oilers, still in the game just before halftime, began coughing the ball. Johnnie Dirden and Ronnie Coleman each fumbled in the closing minute of the half, helping turn the game into a rout.

Bradshaw, who completed 11 of 19 passes for 200 yards, made it 21-3 with a 29-yard scoring pass to Lynn Swann with just 52 seconds left in the second period.

Charlie Waters intercepted two passes, setting up Dallas touchdowns, and the defending champion Cowboys charged into Super Bowl XIII with a 28-0 victory over the Los Angeles Rams in the National Football Conference championship game Sunday.

Waters, who also recovered a fumble, led a Dallas defense that completely frustrated the Rams, forcing seven turnovers — five of them interceptions — by Los Angeles, which was hoping to qualify for its first trip to the Super Bowl.

Make Sure Your Health Protection Adds Up

The money for school only goes so far and spreading it around to all the priorities—including dates, games and clothes—takes a third-year calculus major. But one thing is certain: Without protection from unexpected doctor and hospital bills, your whole budget flies out the window if you get sick or become involved in an accident.

The Health Center is available to take care of minor problems and should be used whenever possible, as the Blue Cross/Blue Shield plan is not designed for minor treatment.

We recommend you enroll in both the BYU Health Center Plan and the Blue Cross/Blue Shield program. After sifting through tons of literature BYU has chosen Blue Cross/Blue Shield as the best insurance program available for the student budget.

The details of the coverage are included in a brochure which was part of your enrollment packet, or which you can secure from the insurance office.

If you have not yet arranged for your coverage for the winter semester you can do so up to January 18th at the Registrars office.

You might not like your advanced math class, but you'll see the numbers fit together when enrolling in the special BYU Blue Cross and Blue Shield Student Program.

In their most successful match of the season, the Cougar matmen swept Saturday's bout with Montana State's Bobcats 51-0.

BYU scored the initial points in every match and grappled four pins on their way to the Montana shut out. "We're in a lot better shape than last week," said Cougar Coach Fred Davis, referring to last Wednesday's 33-11 defeat to Oklahoma State.

Davis mentioned that the Bobcats are a better team than the match according to Davis. "I was real pleased with the young people," he said.

Cougar Brad Davis set the pace for the first-year wrestlers at the onset of the match when he won an 11-7 decision. The 118 pounder from Preston, Idaho beat fellow freshman Mark Orringer, an alternate to the 1976 Olympics and a gold medalist at the 1978 Maccabiah Games in Israel.

In the 126 pound weight class BYU's

Lyle Stratton won a super superior decision over Frank Cheff. Rookie Stratton didn't allow Cheff to score until the third period, and Cheff was held down to three points against Stratton's 20.

Senior Ed Maisey, 134 lbs., upped his record to 9-1 and maneuvered the match's first fall when he cradled senior R.J. Parke in the second period. Maisey is currently ranked fourth in the nation.

The closest contest of the match came in the 142 pounds division.

Cougar Craig Prete and Bobcat Larry LaFountain exchanged points right up to an 11-11 tie at the end of the third treatment.

Brad Hansen, rated first in the nation at 167 pounds and now wrestling in the 177 pounds division, upped his undefeated record to 11-0 by pinning Steve Goetz one minute and 20 seconds into the match.

"They really needed those wins," Davis said, referring to the last two contests of the match, 190 pounds Doug Petersen, in his second performance for the Cougars this year won a 10-1 decision over Andy Romine.

After a scoreless first period heavyweight Cougar Scott Robinson pinned Dave Torchia by starting with a cradle, then rolling him to score the fall with a double arm bar.

Davis said he was "real pleased" with the overall outcome of the match, but indicated that there was more work to be done.

In preparation for next week's competition with Cal State Fullerton and Fresno State on Thursday and Friday, Davis says his team will be concentrating on conditioning and working from the bottom position.

Jazz by Queen self-promoting

Jazz by Queen
Reviewed by Walt Hilkner

Terrific! Queen has invented the first self-promoting album. And they said it couldn't be done. Listening to the album is like listening to a commercial for the album. When do they stop promoting themselves and start singing something worthwhile?

Oh, but the list goes on. "Let Me Entertain You," which closes side one, sings about what a fabulous group Queen is in concert. And the last track on the album, "More Of That Jazz," repeats two or three seconds of some of the case you'd forgotten. We keep waiting for an announcer to overdub, saying, "Yes, folks, that's Queen" on Elektra records and tapes."

All of this is terribly unfortunate and dis-tracting, because Jazz is, musically speaking, one of Queen's highlight albums. There are 133 songs, each direct and accurate, produced by Roy Thomas Baker (back in the saddle again).

Unlike their last album, News Of The World, which collapsed on the second side, Jazz maintains the listener's interest throughout, perhaps it is their most consistent release.

RECORD REVIEW

Especially memorable are "Norway" and "Fragments," all based on lost love, not-yet-found love, or what love means. Highlighted by clean guitar work and otherwise strong voice, backed up by Marvin Payne and Guy Randle, among others of the Provo mellow-rock community.

Furthermore, Queen injects more flat-out rock and roll (odd on an album entitled Jazz), and it works.

But don't look at the poster and don't listen to the lyrics. The music is flash surrounded by trash.

Despite the hindrance of injuries, BYU Coach Greg Sano was pleased with the third ranked team in the nation. He especially cited the efforts of his "freshmen." "They did a good job," he said. "I didn't expect that much of them."

The Cougars trailed SCSC throughout the match, starting with floor exercises, where Wallace Miller and M. McCutcheon of SCSC grabbed first and second places. BYU's Isamu Maesato scored third in that event, and SCSC was in the lead, 36-2-34-50. It appeared the Cougars were gaining on SCSC after the vaulting event, when BYU's Perry Johnson took first, with a score of 9.35, and Maesato placed second with a 9.32. The Cougars narrowed the SCSC lead to only 1.5 points.

SCSC widened their lead on the parallel bars and the highbar, winning both events to finish the meet on top. Maesato took the all-around competition with a high score of 54.84. He was followed by McCutcheon, 54.185, and Miller, 52.5, of SCSC. Maesato was also first on the still rings, tied for the high bar title with SCSC's Miller. Dopp on the pommel horse, and was in a three-way tie for second place on the parallel bars.

Other Cougar placers included Josh Vizek, third on the still rings; and Kurihara, part of the second place tie on the parallel bars, and third on the high bar.

Sano hopes to have his team free of injury by their next meet on Jan. 18, against Oregon.

SCSC drops Cougars in premier gym meet

By LISA JOHNSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Injuries hampered the BYU gymnastics team Friday night as they lost 215.89-218.83 to Southern Connecticut State College in the Cougar's home debut.

Cougar Masahiko Kinjo, a sophomore from Okinawa, Japan, who placed third at last year's NCAAs on the high bar, was suffering from a pulled thigh muscle. Teammate Hiroto Kurihara, a freshman from Fukuoka, Japan who is one of the Cougar's best all-around gymnasts, fell victim to a pulled Achilles tendon he'd acquired three days before.

Despite the hindrance of injuries, BYU Coach Greg Sano was pleased with the Cougar performances in the nation. He especially cited the efforts of his "freshmen." "They did a good job," he said. "I didn't expect that much of them."

The Cougars trailed SCSC throughout the match, starting with floor exercises, where Wallace Miller and M. McCutcheon of SCSC grabbed

first and second places. BYU's Isamu Maesato scored third in that event, and SCSC was in the lead, 36-2-34-50. It appeared the Cougars were gaining on SCSC after the vaulting event, when BYU's Perry Johnson took first, with a score of 9.35, and Maesato placed second with a 9.32. The Cougars narrowed the SCSC lead to only 1.5 points.

SCSC widened their lead on the parallel bars and the highbar, winning both events to finish the meet on top. Maesato took the all-around competition with a high score of 54.84. He was followed by McCutcheon, 54.185, and Miller, 52.5, of SCSC. Maesato was also first on the still rings, tied for the high bar title with SCSC's Miller. Dopp on the pommel horse, and was in a three-way tie for second place on the parallel bars.

Other Cougar placers included Josh Vizek, third on the still rings; and Kurihara, part of the second place tie on the parallel bars, and third on the high bar.

Sano hopes to have his team free of injury by their next meet on Jan. 18, against Oregon.

Injuries hampered the BYU gymnastics team Friday night as they lost 215.89-218.83 to Southern Connecticut State College in the Cougar's home debut.

Cougar Masahiko Kinjo, a sophomore from Okinawa, Japan, who placed third at last year's NCAAs on the high bar, was suffering from a pulled thigh muscle. Teammate Hiroto Kurihara, a freshman from Fukuoka, Japan who is one of the Cougar's best all-around gymnasts, fell victim to a pulled Achilles tendon he'd acquired three days before.

Despite the hindrance of injuries, BYU Coach Greg Sano was pleased with the Cougar performances in the nation. He especially cited the efforts of his "freshmen." "They did a good job," he said. "I didn't expect that much of them."

Anger on Taiwan, but underneath, 'We have a long friendship'

By FORREST ANDERSON
and DONNA ROUVIERE
Monday Magazine Writers

Dozens of dark, expressionless eyes followed the two Mormon missionaries as they made their way to their seats on the passenger train in southern Taiwan. They settled uneasily into their seats as the train jolted to a start, acutely conscious of the light hair and bright that has shut Red China off from the rest of the world has been slowly rising.

Chien-hsien, a professor of history at Taiwan University, said, "Taiwan will open up even more than in the past to others in an effort to compete with world members in Red China."

"The future policy of Taiwan will be to promote and strengthen commercial and cultural relations with foreign countries," he said. Tourist visas for across Taiwan, presidencies of the coun-sies' two missions immediately issued terse memos to all missionaries advising them to discontinue active proselytizing.

In Taipei, missionaries were restricted to their apartments for two weeks. In the southern mission, they were given more freedom, but were not allowed to act for several days. A daily check-in system was set up to insure all missionaries' safety.

Normalization, looked upon by many

LDS people as perhaps a first step in the gradual opening of Red China to missionary work, was viewed less positively by people involved in proselytizing on Taiwan.

"We're wasting a lot of time staying home," said "It's kind of hard to get people baptized when you can't go outside," visual signs of the break were acid political cartoons on posters in public places. But underneath the surface, Taiwan's characteristic pro-American friendliness had turned to disappointed shock and rage.

Two Chinas

The United States, Carter declared in announcing the policy change, has recognized that there is only one China and Taiwan is a part of it. But Taiwan's reaction has shockingly reemphasized the bitter reality of two Chinas. For in spite of both countries' insistence that there is only one, and the world's general adherence to that myth, the nations of Taiwan and mainland China remain poles apart.

"We all knew it would happen someday, but it was so sudden, and we were given no warning," said Chin

Yung-ting, a student at Ohio State University.

"They didn't have to accept for everything the Communists asked for,"

said an angry student from Taipei.

Dark, expressionless Chinese eyes throughout Taiwan followed American visitors in hostile silence following the U.S. pact with Red China.

"They just accepted everything the Communists wanted them to."

In the initial shock of normalization, which took even Taiwan's leaders by surprise, anti-American feelings ran high. Caught in the middle of that feeling were Taiwan's 250 LDS missionaries, most of whom are American.

As news of normalization flashed across Taiwan, presidencies of the country's two missions immediately issued terse memos to all missionaries advising them to discontinue active proselytizing. In Taipei, missionaries were restricted to their apartments for two weeks. In the southern mission, they were given more freedom, but were not allowed to act for several days. A daily check-in system was set up to insure all missionaries' safety.

"They didn't have to accept for

everything the Communists asked for,"

said an angry student from Taipei.

"Your church," he said, "makes a very good impression in China. Many of my friends are impressed with your missionaries."

The strongly nationalistic unity of the island may be its strongest asset. Taiwan newspapers, in reporting news of normalization, made strong appeals to the people of Taiwan to strengthen the country internally. One paper, devoted its entire front page to a large full-color Taiwan flag and passionate headlines emphasizing patriotism.

Rising Bamboo Curtain

In the meantime, the Bamboo Curtain is rising in China. Now, the government says of the U.S. is an advanced country. Citizens of Red China, who during Mao's reign were forbidden to even talk to Americans in the country, are now allowed, even encouraged, to interact with them, and American visitors are greeted with "hundreds of questions."

And, as Red China has slowly begun to break down its anti-American stance, recent convert's letter to a sister missionary who had taught her was more typical, though.

"We still love you"

"Though our government is through with yours, we still love you, especially you missionaries," she wrote. "We especially that the real friendship between the two countries has just begun."

As the shock wore off, missionary work was resumed as usual. The regular monthly group of Missionary Training Center missionaries left for Taiwan on schedule. And plans to open a third mission in the center of the island went on.

The long-term effect still remains to be seen. President P. Boyd Hales of the Taiwan Kaohsiung Mission observed, "It will affect the missionary work,"

However, he said, as the Taiwanese become used to the new situation, their resentment against individual

Americans will die down. Comments of Taiwan citizens support his view.

"This situation is one of the governments, not the citizens," said a taxi driver in southern Taiwan.

"We're angry at Carter, not at all Americans. Our president has told us to keep friendly relations with Americans,"

said a Taiwanese girl.

Fear of U.S. — Red China normalization

Their anger stems not from the event itself, but from a feeling that the United States could have made an agreement with Red China which would have allowed formal relations with Taiwan to continue.

However, U.S. action in Taiwan over the last decade indicates the United States has been prepared for years to accept the terms it agreed on in the U.S. —

China pact. U.S. military troops once numbering between 8,000 and 10,000 on the tiny island, have been gradually reduced to between 1,000 and 2,000 since the Nixon administration. Reasons for the withdrawal were originally top-secret information, but U.S. military sources

now admit the move was planned as that has shut Red China off from the rest of the world has been slowly rising. Chen Chien-hsien, a professor of history at Taiwan University, who fled the mainland during the Communist takeover after World War II, corresponds with family members of her family since the Communist takeover; her family since the Chinese Communist takeover was made possible by the U.S. — China agreement.

During Mao Tse-tung's Cultural Revolution in the early '70s, he says, the United States was called "the Paper Tiger" in China. Now, the government says of the U.S. is an advanced country. Citizens of Red China, who during Mao's reign were forbidden to even talk to Americans in the country, are now allowed, even encouraged, to interact with them, and American visitors are greeted with "hundreds of questions."
